FORTY-SPOTTED PARDALOTE

Tasmanian Endemic Species & Endangered Species

The Forty-spotted Pardalote is one of Australia's rarest birds, and by far the rarest Pardalote, being confined to the south-east corner of Tasmania. Now found reliably only in a few isolated colonies most notably on Maria Island and Bruny Island. It is declining in numbers and is listed as endangered.

SUPERB FAIRY-WREN

Fairy-wrens are one of Australia's favourite birds. They're so popular on social media birding pages that they've named a day after them . . . Wrensday.

The females are mostly brown with a dull orange area around the eyes, and a brown bill. The young males have a similar appearance without the eye patch, and they have a black bill. The males don their beautiful blue and black tuxedos during the mating season. Older males retain their colours year round. The males present the females with yellow flowers as part of their courting ritual.

TASMANIAN SILVEREYE

Some Tasmanian Silvereyes make an annual 1,600 kilometre trek from Tasmania, across Bass Strait, and as far north as Queensland, to spend the cooler months with their mainland cousins. They are generally a little larger and darker, having dark reddish-brown coloured flanks. Their throats are whitish/greyish in colour while the mainland species have a yellow throat and much lighter flanks.

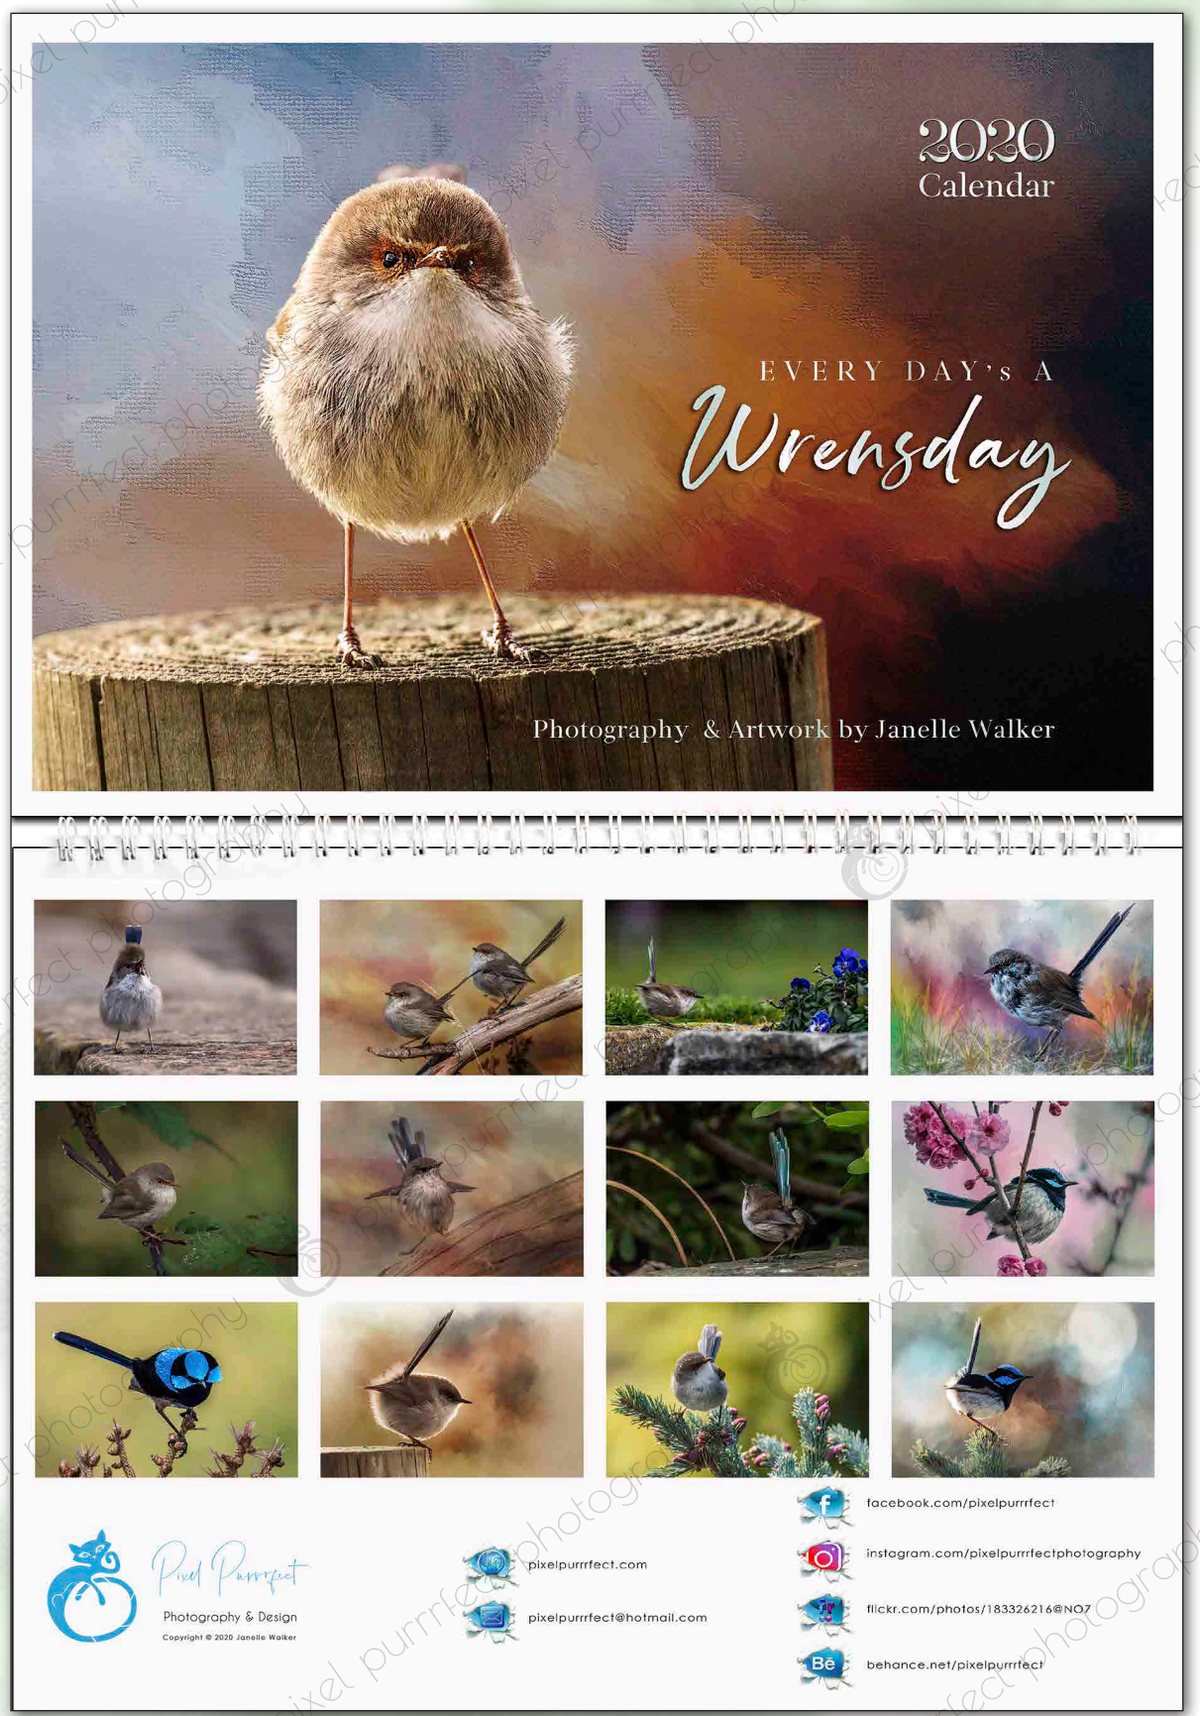
WINGED WONDERS OF TASMANIA- 2020 CALENDAR

A delightful collection of photographic images of some Tasmania's most beautiful bird life.

EVERY DAY'S A WRENSDAY - 2020 CALENDAR

Our little Wrens are so popular that they've even named a day of the week after them . . . Wrensday. But they're so cute that it would be a crime not to enjoy them every day of the year. A Superb Fairy-wren for every month of the year. This calendar is a mix of photographic and digital art images



A SEAT UP BACK - 2020 CALENDAR

Join me on my seat up back on a ride taking in breathtaking scenery around Tasmania. There is also one image taken in Victoria that just had to be included as the sunset was so awesome.
